From the Editor's Desk

Arya Chavda was invited to deliver a lecture on 8 Aug 2022. She is a class 7 student, a practicing crusader of 'Save the Environment', has written more than half a dozen books on climate change and delivered lectures in several counties. Her words: "we need to develop sensitiveness towards our mother earth," was amazing.

In this regard, certainly, there is an urgency to deal with the climate-change disasters - though nothing substantial the world community seems to have learned as yet. The journey from COP26 in Glasgow to the recently concluded COP27 at Sharm-el-Sheikh, the counties rather than bothering with how quickly to curtail the use of fossil fuel and shift to clean energy solutions, we are still engaged in world-war politics. We tend to forget the avalanche in the Himalayan Mountains, crop failures in most parts of India, floods in Pakistan, heat waves in Europe, forest fires in Australia, hurricanes in the US, volcanic eruptions in Indonesia so on and so forth. It is reported that whole the world would need about $2 trillion annually to cut the greenhouse gas emissions and cope with climate challenge.

Just by blaming the rich counties to be responsible for half of the greenhouse effects, the poor countries cannot be responsible-free. It is a wise step by the present government to accumulate fossil fuel at a highly subsidised rate from Russia, but the rising dependency is unlikely to come down sooner in comparison to the consumption pattern being registered. Therefore, as ordinary citizens, our responsibility is to change our life-style and imbibe an eco-friendly sustainable environment so that catastrophe like situations are avoided, and next generation benefits out of it.
